JAPAN'S CROWN PRINCE.
Is Coming to America to Spend His Honeymoon.

Prince Yoshihito, crown prince of Japan, who is to visit this country with his bride the coming spring, is a slender, undersized young man who is chiefly interesting because he will some day succeed to what there is left of imperial prerogative in the land of the chrysanthemum. As a boy he was almost an invalid, and for many years it was thought that he would never reach his majority. But his health has improved of late. He has been crown prince ever since he was 8 years old. He will be 21 next August.

His affianced bride is the Princess Feiko, who is his cousin. She is a most charming young woman, of course. She has the reputation of being the most beautiful woman in her country and the ideal type of Japanese womanhood. The announcement of the coming marriage has caused great satisfaction throughout Japan, because it gives reasonable assurance that the throne will be occupied by a scion of the present royal house for many years to come.

The marriage will take place in the spring, and immediately afterward the royal couple will start on their trip. They will first visit all of the largest cities in Europe and will sail for America about July 1. In New York they will be met by a delegation composed of the wealthiest Japanese in the country, several of whom are related to the royalty. From New York they will go to Philadelphia and afterward will visit Washington, Boston, Chicago and San Francisco.
