Offense: Line coming along at fullback.

"This is Midwest City, we should have a good selection of running backs," Hall said.

The biggest key for the offense will be the strength of their offensive line, which has struggled in recent years. Hall said the unit has looked good this offseason and should benefit from a simplified blocking scheme that is heavy on the run.

"The biggest point is our offensive line needs to get it going," Hall said. "They've looked the best at this point since I've been here."

Returning starters DeMond Rucker, Ryan Tilbury and Morgan Moore will anchor the line this fall. Rucker and Moore return on the left side of the line with Tilbury back at center. Moore and Tilbury are both wrestlers, while Rucker has been a mainstay on the offensive line. The 6-foot-5 Moore has improved his quickness and aggressive and is drawing attention from D-I schools.

Donovan Mills and Israel Cotton-Embry will play at right guard, while Jaden Cotton and Caleb Hatfield are battling for the right tackle spot.

Del City won't have to wait long for a test on the field. They open the season Sept. 2 against Bishop McGuinness, the school that beat them in the first round of the playoffs last fall. Lawton Eisenhower and Midwest City will round a tough non-district schedule.

"I'm really looking forward to playing McGuinness again," said senior Chase Holland. "We lost by five points to them in the playoffs last year and we need some redemption. And then Midwest City is always a favorite game of ours."

Things won't get any easier during district play. The Eagles travel to defending state champion Altus in the first district game. They will also face Lawton MacArthur, Ardmore and Duncan in the regular season.
