or three years ago, where I found this music that I liked. My guard instructor, Ryan Bateman, made the suggestion that it sounded like it could be a good Amelia Earhart theme show. I thought that was a great idea. Well, we did a couple of other shows, in between now and then, and came back to this one, because I just really liked the music. So, we decided we would go with it and we were talking about different concepts for Amelia Earhart. We were trying to select a show title and we got to the phrase "Fantastic Voyage." TRMS Band Director Leigh Boyce said the title sounded more like a cruise than anything else and then she suggested "Beyond the Blue Horizon." I knew right then and there that it needed to be the title of the show."

The show is in three movements. The first movement depicts the idea of Amelia Earhart dreaming of flying and thinking of what her flight would be. The second movement slows down a little bit and the audience hears what is called 'soaring'. Earhart can visually be seen flying in the airplane. This sequence will feature band captain and senior Claire Rollins performing a couple of trumpet solos. The third movement shows Earhart getting lost and that is the title.

Asked to list the tunes for the show, Westbrook explained, "There is really nothing anyone could pick out in a song, but the flow of the songs are dreaming of flying, soaring and lost."

This year's field show and contest theme "Beyond the Blue Horizon" should help the Peabody Band of Gold take off en route to accomplishing the music program's goals.
