

County health department offers fair safety tips

Wyandot County Public Health wants you to make this fair season safe and enjoyable. To protect your health while visiting animal exhibits at the fair, follow these simple tips from the CDC:

Hand-washing stations.

Find out where hand-washing stations are located and use them often.

Always wash your hands after petting animals or touching the animal enclosures, especially before eating and drinking.

Running water and soap are best. Use sanitizing hand gels if running water and soap are not available.

Food and drinks.

Keep food and drinks out of animal areas.

Do not share your food with animals.

Children.

Children younger than five years old need supervision.

Never allow children to put their hands or objects (for example: pacifiers) in their mouth while interacting with animals.

Hand washing should be supervised.

Children younger than 5 years of age, people older than 65 and people with weakened immune systems should take special care around animal exhibits.

For more information regarding staying healthy while visiting animal exhibits, as well as other health and safety tips, follow the Health Department's Facebook page at www.facebook.com/wyandotcountyhealthdepartment or check out the website, www.wyandothealth.com

Work and play at the 2016 Wyandot County Fair. Above, the fair takes a lot of elbow grease to run smoothly. At left, fun with a bunny.
