Janet and Justin Hammond have owned and operated H&H Roofing for over nine years. When Janet was asked to comment about the business she stated "My favorite thing about H&H Roofing is the opportunity it has given not only my family but our employees and their families. We currently have 14 employees and owning a company that provides jobs warms my heart. I would have never imagined H&H Roofing would grow to what it is today, but God knew. He has truly orchestrated our steps and we are so blessed he has chosen us to lead this company." H&H Roofing is open from 8-5 Monday through Friday. Stop by or call them at 620-285-0040.

How$mart helps Kansans improve energy efficiency

Midwest Energy's How$mart program has helped hundreds of its customers lower their energy bills significantly, while improving the energy efficiency of their homes or businesses.

The How$mart process begins with a certified energy auditor visiting the home, finding problem areas and recommending fixes such as new central heating and cooling equipment, additional attic and wall insulation, and air sealing. The homeowner selects a local contractor to perform the work, and Midwest Energy pays up to 100 percent of the cost of improvements (homeowners may have to pay for part of the improvements if the projected savings are lower). Repayment is made through the savings on the monthly energy bill.

Since 2008, more than 1,700 homeowners have participated in How$mart. Midwest Energy has invested $10 million to date in its customers' homes ($1.19 million in 2016 alone), while customers have added $3 million of their own funds to cover improvements not offset by energy savings. Local contractors typically complete improvements, further stimulating business growth in small communities. The average How$mart participant saves roughly $53 per month on their utility bill while reducing their carbon footprint.
