

Magical Martin Day

Martin will once again turn into a magical wonderland this Labor Day (Monday, Sept. 4) as it celebrates the Soybean with its youngest citizens.

This marks the fourth year for Magical Martin Day and it promises to be bigger than ever! The day begins at 3:30 p.m. in Weldon Park with free activities for everyone.

Of course, everyone's old favorites will be there again this year. There will be carnival rides, train rides, inflatables, petting zoo, face painters, the Bippity Boppity hair booth, a roving balloon artist, themed games and booths, crafts, free food, all of your favorite princesses and superheroes, and the zip line will be back this year. There will also be a variety of food trucks and vendors on-site with food and snacks for purchase.

There are so many activities going on that it is impossible to list them all,

Kids and kids at heart are encouraged to dress as their favorite superhero or princess and join the fun.

"We are so excited to bring the Magic to Martin again this year," event organizer Suzanne Harper reports. "With the generous donations of time and resources of many volunteers and businesses in the area, we are looking forward to this event being bigger and better than ever this year. We are thankful to provide so many free activities for the families in our area to be able to enjoy the magic that our community has to offer."

The evening continues with live performances from the Martin Community Band, featuring Rachel Taulbee at 5:30 in Festival Park.

The musical theme will be Superhero/Disney and will set the tone for a magical evening in Martin.
