

School of Rock, Festival Park, Friday Sept. 8

A very special group of musicians will be performing during the Soybean Festival, and their focus will be on entertaining kids.

The School of Rock is a unique music education school. SoR was founded in 1998 in Philadelphia. The School of Rock has grown to exist in over 170 countries. It specializes in teaching students who are interested in the rock and roll genre. The school's philosophy is that live performances are the best way to teach kids how to play instruments and work together as a band. Some of the best child-aged musicians learn at the School of Rock and participate in their All Stars program. These students go on tour several times a year.

The Nashville and Franklin chapters of the school are owned by one of our own, Kelly McCreight, son of Wayne McCreight, CEO of Hamilton Ryker. This year these rockin' kids will be the opening act for Air Supply at 7 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 8, in Festival Park. It is a child-friendly event, so bring your children to see this awesome group of young musicians.

A ticket is required.
