Current River Conservation Area Offers Many Activities

Current River Conservation Area is a popular place for nature lovers. People enjoy hiking, hunting, fishing, bird watching, and viewing wildlife here. There area also has a shooting range, a Civil War fort, and a fire tire.

Current River Conservation Area was created by combining Deer Run, Carrs Creek, Cardareva and Paint Rock state forests. The entire area encompasses approximately 28,000 acres. The Current River Conservation Area is the home of the Missouri Ozark Forest Ecosystem Project

(MOFEP). MOFEP is one of the most comprehensive forest management studies in North America. MOFEP is a 100 year project assigned to monitor the long-term effects of different forest management regimes covering 9,000 acres of Ozark forest and its associated plant and animal life.

Deer Run Unit
The Deer Run Unit began as a game refuge and state park in 1925 with 6,625 acres. In 1926, the state's first fire tower was erected to help protect Missouri's forest land from fire. Many of the area's roads, ponds and food plots are the result of the CCC whose Camp
