Everyone walked away after a two-vehicle wreck on West Broad in which one of the vehicles plunged into a flood-swollen stream in front of Walmart Thursday morning.

Police say Catherine Newby, 74, of Smithville was driving a 2012 Nissan Altima, and was pulling out onto West Broad from Anthony Avenue, when she crossed the path of a 2011 Jeep, driven by Tammy Harris, 50, of Murfreesboro. She was going east on Broad Street. Newby's car ran off the highway down an embankment and stopped near a flowing creek.

Harris told police that she tried to stop to avoid the collision but couldn't due to the wet road conditions. Newby told officers that after the collision she accidentally pressed the accelerator instead of the brake.

DTC Communications gets broadband grant

DTC Communications has been awarded a $1.725 million grant to make more high-speed broadband Internet available to rural Tennesseans. The grant is a product of Governor Bill Haslam's Tennessee Broadband Accessibility Act, and was awarded by the Tennessee Department of Economic & Community Development.

DTC Communications serves residents in Cannon, DeKalb, Rutherford, Smith and Wilson counties. The grant will cover areas near Plunkett Creek and Rawls Creek roads in Smith County and areas near Watertown in Wilson County. "With this grant money and DTC's matching contribution, we will be able to reach out and help more of the underserved and unserved in our area," said Chris Townson, DTC's CEO. The project includes building miles of new fiber optic lines in and around the designated grant area, and is expected to take up to two years to complete. Townson continued, "The grant helps DTC continue its efforts to build a state-of-the-art fiber optic network for our members and the region we serve. It's an exciting time for DTC Communications."
