Scoring slowed until the sixth, when Warren County used an error to get two more runs. After Will Cantrell was hit by a pitch to reach, Hennessee took the opportunity to move his teammate into scoring position with a bunt.

When the throw to first sailed into right field, Cantrell was able to score and Hennessee went around to third. Jennings followed with a sac fly, giving the Pioneers a 6-0 lead.

Catcher Braden Bottoms ended the sixth inning by throwing out Young at second, backing up Hollingsworth after he surrendered a lead-off single.

The command seemed to be slipping from the senior by the seventh inning, when he plunked the first two batters he faced. Hollingsworth recovered to force an

Softball

Hailey Wood sets the table for the volleyball team in the fall, then finds herself pacing the Lady Pioneer offense in the spring. Wood, already committed to Cumberland University to play softball, may be the toughest out in District 6AAA.

And the list goes on.

Bri Young went from a vital bench role during the Lady Pioneer basketball region run to a backstop and big bat on the diamond. Hope Mullican has been a multi-year starter for volleyball and softball, making region starts for both teams.

Sensational newcomer Rhealee Johnson made varsity rosters in basketball and softball. She'll likely be a mainstay in both starting lineups the next three years.

The next crop of Lady Pioneers are no slouches either. The WCMS team is 10-1, loaded with girls who will make the move to the next level in the spring of 2019.

If there's one thing I can predict with certainty, it's that WCHS softball is going to be successful, now and in the future.
