Park Theater will have a returning favorite on its stage, welcoming back comedian T.C. Cope this Friday, April 20.

"If you missed him the first time, here's your chance," said Park Theater manager Kevin Roberts. "He was a real crowd pleaser."

Cope, a stand-up comedian, dished out plenty of laughter in May 2016. His tour "Laughing is Living" offers the message laughter is the best technique for survival.

He was raised in McMinnville and was a graduate of Warren County High School in 1980.

Cope delighted audiences with reminiscing about his childhood during his first Park Theater show.

"My grandmother tried to keep me from peeing in the bed," he said. "She did everything she could. She would whoop me. She tried to embarrass me. She would put my sheets outside on the line so my friends could see it. They were calling me nicknames. Couple of them called me sunshine, because it had that big yellow ring on it. I could not stop peeing in the bed. My grandmother said 'I know how to break you.' She jacked that sheet off the bed and rubbed it in my face. Call it what you want but I haven't peed in the bed since."

Cope takes the stage April 20 at 7 p.m. Tickets are $15. Seating is reserved.

Tickets can be purchased online at Ticket Biscuit, the Park Theater website, or at the box office on Main Street.

Get ready to pay more at the pump.

According to AAA – The Auto Club, conflict in the Middle East has sent crude prices to their highest point in more than three years and motorists will soon feel the pain when they stop for fuel.

"Motorists should expect a 15-cent increase at the pump in the short term," said Mark Jenkins, spokesman for AAA - The Auto Club Group.

"However, prices could rise even more, depending on how the crude market responds to the latest news of a U.S. missile strike over the weekend." The national average price for gasoline is the highest in more than two years and pump prices will get more expensive this week, AAA says.

Sunday's average of $2.71 is the highest since July 2015. Tennessee gas prices are the most expensive since last September, when prices were recovering from Hurricane Irma. Sunday's state average of $2.52 is 6 cents more than last week, and 34 cents more than last year.

HIGHS AND LOWS OF 2018

National: the highest average price for gasoline was $2.70 on April 13. The lowest was $2.49 on Jan. 3.

Tennessee: the highest average price was $2.50 on April 13. The lowest was $2.26 on Jan. 1.

Sleeping man found in possession of six different drugs

A man found sleeping in the parking lot of an apartment complex faces numerous charges after police found six different drugs in his possession.

James Cowan Evans Jr., 33, has his next court appearance set for June 19 after he was reportedly found with meth, marijuana, clonazepam, hydrocodone, alprazolam and suboxone on his person or in his vehicle earlier this month.

The incident which led to Evans' arrest occurred April 5 when police were informed there was a man passed out at Arms Apartments inside his vehicle. Evans was found in the driver's seat of a 1998 Honda Accord.

According to the warrant for his arrest, Evans gave consent for a search of his person. A variety of prescription medication was reportedly found in his wallet and in his pants pocket. He told the officer he did not have a prescription for the pills.

After Evans was taken into custody, his vehicle was searched. A backpack was found on the front passenger seat.

"Inside the backpack was a black sunglass case containing a glass pipe and a small plastic container with a green, leafy-like substance believed to be marijuana," the warrant reads. "Also in the backpack was a red coozie that contained a cut straw, glass pipe, and a vile containing a crystal-like substance believed to be methamphetamine."
