While Beth Ann Barnett credits Drama Club with helping her face and conquer her stage fright, Emery Stefanick said she's always felt comfortable performing in front of an audience and this provides her with an outlet.

Ainsley Stefanick says Drama Club has made her more resourceful. "For me, Drama Club has improved my creative thinking skills in a sense of what can I do with a limited amount of resources and a limited amount of time."

One area that all drama club members agreed upon is family and community support are needed to pursue their interests and offer future stage productions.

Admission is donation only. WCMS Drama Club advisors are Marsha Riggs and Jennifer Heath.

GRAND JURY

A man charged in the shooting death of his roommate in March is one of the many people indicted by the Warren County grand jury on Friday.

Greggory Allen Koller, 61, was indicted for criminal homicide and tampering with or fabricating evidence.

Koller was charged in March after he reportedly made a frantic 911 call claiming to have shot and killed his roommate, Steven Pohl, 57, in self-defense after a drunken argument. The two shared a home in a remote location atop Harrison Ferry Mountain. Koller said Pohl pulled a gun on him and he was forced to shoot.

After believing his self-defense claim initially, further investigation resulted in Koller's arrest after it was determined he staged the crime scene and placed a gun next to the victim's body.

Brown arrested

Lt. Cory Knowles tried to use spike strips to halt the chase and nearly got run over in the process.

"The vehicles slowed, targeted and deliberately accelerated at Lt. Knowles with his vehicle coming within inches of striking Lt. Knowles at speeds in excess of 100 mph, forcing Lt. Knowles to jump out of the way to avoid injury," the warrant says. "The vehicle continued into the city limits of McMinnville where he again ran vehicles off the roadway prompting the pursuit to be called off due to public safety."

The Honda Accord entered McMinnville on

Nashville Highway, was able to avoid additional spike strips in the Newtown area, and reached Hardee's on West Main Street. That's when the pursuit was called off by police.
