

Haslacker seeks 8th District commission seat

Hello, my name is William M. Haslacker. I moved south in 1997 to Alabama from Michigan from a GM plant in Warren, Mich., to a GM Plant in Athens, Ala. I always intended to retire in Tennessee, which I did in 2000. I lived near Dunlap in Sequatchie County before I moved to Warren County on Harrison Ferry Mountain. While living in Sequatchie County, I was a member of the Sequatchie County Democratic Party for approximately seven years. For almost four years, I was its treasurer. Prior to that, I worked for General Motors for 33 and a half years. For 20 of those years, I was involved in union politics. For a number of years, I was a union representative, which some refer to as a shop steward. In GM, it is called a district committee person who comes under the local shop committee. I represented workers with problems they faced the Vietnam Service Medal.

I have worked most of my life since I was about 13 years old in my dad's service station and auto garage until I was old enough to join the Navy. I believe I can do a good job as a county commissioner. I have approximately 60 years of experience in many different job situations. This has educated and given me the ability to handle most things I have taken on in my life.

I understand how government is supposed to work for people and oftentimes doesn't. What seems to have been lost in recent years is our ability to give and take. By this, I mean to discuss, debate and compromise and come to an agreement that is good for all the people, the county, the state and the country.

When we as Americans demand this of all our politicians and lawmakers, we will all be better off and move forward in the 21st century and not backward to the 20th century.

What people need to realize is politicians reflect us. Politicians have to work together for all the American people. Then, our democracy will be stronger rather than weaker, which seems to be the way we are headed now in this country.

Gallagher seeks 9th District seat

I am Terry Gallagher and my roots run deep in Warren County. This is my home and I am seeking the 9th District County Commission seat.

My wife Vicki and I raised our three daughters here and I own and have operated a business here for over 35 years. We care about this county and its future. One of my primary concerns is about the increasing debt, which could double in the next six years. I am not in favor of a tax rate increase.

Our county must plan and budget now in order to reduce future debt while using tax dollars more efficiently. Warren County's future industrial growth depends heavily upon the available qualified labor force. There must be an open dialog between business and educators to prepare our children to meet the demands of the work force. We need an integrated vocational education program as well as a good college preparation program.

Our county is preparing to build an addition to our jail in order to accommodate the growing number of inmates. I believe we need to implement education and life skill programs as well as partnering with local businesses to provide inmates with on-the-job training for a successful reintegration into the community, thus breaking the cycle of catch and release.

I believe my education and business experience at Heather Farms Nursery provide me the tools to address these issues and represent the citizens of the 9th District of Warren County. I appreciate your vote and support.
