Tails were wagging as the Boyd Foundation presented the city of McMinnville with $25,000 on Friday to help establish a dog park.

"I think this will be a wonderful addition to the city of McMinnville," said McMinnville Parks and Recreation director Scott McCord. "It's great for our two-legged and our four-legged friends. Dog owners have been asking for a park to take their pets so they can run off leash and this grant will help establish one. I couldn't be happier."

Among the individuals in attendance were members of the McMinnville Board of Mayor and Aldermen, as well as Randy and Jenny Boyd. The couple established the Boyd Foundation in 2018 and it funds Tennessee Dog Park Dash which is dedicated to building or enhancing dog parks across the state.

McMinnville was one of 36 communities to receive a $25,000 grant.

"Each application was scored by the Tennessee Dog Park Dash Committee in three categories: need, impact and support," said Rachel Worley, PR and marketing specialist for Design Sensory. "McMinnville's application showed the community is in dire need of a dog park. For McMinnville residents, it was clear that a new dog park would be a key amenity to the community." The grant application detailed the impact a dog park would have on McMinnville residents by bringing everyone together and building lasting friendships.

One community received a $100,000 grant. Winning the grand prize was Jackson, Tenn.

"Choosing winners for both the $25,000 grants and the $100,000 grand prize was incredibly difficult," said Randy Boyd. "The Dog Park Dash Committee reviewed so many great applications from communities dedicated to making Tennessee the most pet-friendly state in America. We want them all to feel encouraged because they truly did a wonderful job."

To be considered for a grant, applicants were also asked to verify land availability. McMinnville officials selected the vacant lots across the street from Pepper Branch Park. The awards ceremony was held at the gazebo Friday morning.
