Acting TBI director broke no laws, grand jury says

STATE ROUNDUP

NASHVILLE (AP) — A grand jury investigating use of state funds by the former acting director of the TBI has found no law was violated.

Jason Locke stepped down as interim leader in June amid the investigation.

Locke had been a finalist for the permanent post, but Gov. Bill Haslam's office produced emails that Haslam received from Locke's wife. The emails alleged her husband used taxpayer money to carry on an affair with another state official, Sejal West of the Tennessee Department of Mental Health & Substance Abuse Services.

The grand jury also said it found no violation of law by West.

Locke's lawyer, Jeff Cherry, issued a statement Friday evening saying Locke cooperated throughout the investigation and chose to retire from the TBI out of respect for the agency and not because he was guilty of a crime.

The Davidson County grand jury foreman's statement dated Tuesday was released by the district attorney's office Friday.

NASHVILLE (AP) — Tennessee health officials say at least 74 people have contracted hepatitis A in Nashville since last December.

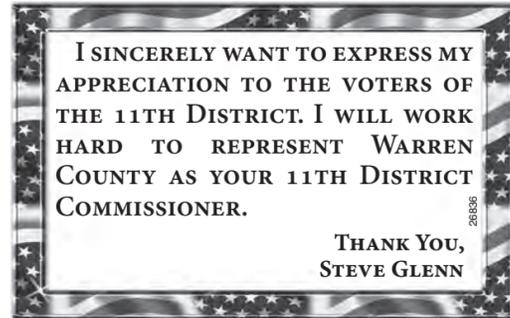

Nashville's Metro Public Health Department said in a statement on Friday it continues to work with state and local officials to urge people to get vaccinated in an effort to end the outbreak. The statement says free vaccines for at-risk groups are being offer at three public health centers. Health officials say at-risk groups include drug users, homeless people or men who have sexual contact with other men.

Hepatitis A is a liver disease caused by a virus but it can spread through close contact with an infected person. Symptoms include fever, nausea, vomiting, abdominal pain and dark urine.

Other states, including Kentucky and West Virginia, have also reported outbreaks.
