Castle Row Studios, located at 2908 Epperly Dr. in Del City has been open since late 2016 and continues to grow and thrive. In fact it was just voted the 2018 Del City Business of the Year. The building has a lot of history for the city as well. It was once the Del City movie theater, built in 1949 by George Epperly. It then turned into Del City music and Woodside Studios, owned by Bob Wood, where names like Reba McEntire, Vince Gill, Merle Haggard and Dolly Parton have all recorded. Ashton and Garrett Starks came across the building, in beat up disarray and knew it was the perfect place for the studio that they envisioned creating. They didn't just want to create any studio though, they wanted to make a unique state of the art studio that would stand out among the crowd. The Starks actually traveled all over the U.S. just to hand pick the pieces of equipment that would go into the studio. They also hired Steven Durr, an engineer from Nashville, to help design the studio.

The 10,600 square-foot facility houses three distinctive recording studios, a live music space, plenty of production rooms and has it in the works for an on-site apartment to be available for musicians to stay in while recording. They don't want to just
