Best School Memory: It was during our trip this year for quilting class. We were going to Grand Forks to get fabric for our quilts. It was a really fun day. Sienna was so amusing all day and I had a great time hanging out with my classmates that I've never really hung out with before. But, what topped it off was when some of the girls in the van thought they heard a mouse. There was scratching by the left side of the van by the window. I believe it was Emma who first heard the noise. Everyone started to freak out including Mrs. P, while I sat there laughing my butt off. I thought Emma and Sara were gonna jump out of the van!! All the way back to the school, everyone was on edge listening for that scratching noise. I could not stop laughing at everyone. I kept telling them there is no way there is a mouse in the door panel of the van. Later on, we found out it was actually the broom scraping across the window of the van. I will never forget that day!!
