Associated Press
The Mississippi Legislature on Tuesday started its three-month session with plenty of issues to consider. Lawmakers could debate creating a lottery. They could try to rewrite a school funding formula. They could seek a long-term plan to pay for highway con-

Mississippi is one of six states without a lottery. House Speaker Philip Gunn and Lt. Gov. Tate Reeves both oppose creating one, but the Republican leaders have acknowledged that many legislators would like to vote on the issue.
"I do not believe it is the huge revenue increase that some have said it would be," Reeves told reporters Tuesday. "Because I think what you would see is some folks that are spending 100 percent of their disposable income ... rather than just going to the grocery store and buying a Coke or buying a pack of Nabs, they would instead go and buy lottery tickets."

In a separate interview Tuesday, Gunn said his

It sure felt good going home to Coffeetown and no one was really sick or hospitalized. Of course my baby brother had a cold; he almost had pneumonia.

top priorities are rewriting Mississippi's public school funding formula, finding more money for roads and bridges, and reauthorizing the state's Medicaid program.

"We want to find a formula that is predictable, that is understandable, that is reliable," Gunn said the proposed overhaul of the $2 billion-plus school funding formula.

Gunn said a bill was being drafted that would resemble many of the recommendations of EdBuild, a New Jersey-based nonprofit group that made suggestions last year at the behest of Republican leaders.

The current funding formula, called the Mississippi Adequate Education Program, was put into law in 1997. It is intended to give each school district enough money to meet midlevel education standards, but legislators have only fully funded it two years.

Democratic Sen. Hob Bryan of Amory, who helped write the current formula, said legislators back then conducted committee meetings that were open to the public. He said the process this time is secretive.

"The fact that this has been going on now for more than a year and it's still taking place in secret ought to absolutely terrify everybody who cares about public education in the state of Mississippi," Bryan said Tuesday.

God is Still Sovereign

Paul urges us to "rejoice in the Lord always!" (Philippians 4:4). Not just on paydays, good days, or birthdays. But rejoice in the Lord always.

Rejoice in the Lord always? "Yeah, right," mumbles the person from the hospital bed. "How?" sighs the unemployed dad. "Always?" questions the mother of the baby born with a disability.

It's one thing to rejoice in the Lord when life is good, but when the odds are against you? It's not easy, but it is possible. Lay claim to the promise of God in Colossians 1:17: "He is before all things, and in him all things hold together." Rejoice in the sovereignty of God. His throne is still occupied. His will is still perfect. Rejoice in the Lord--always.

God uses everything to accomplish his will.

This is the second year of a four-year term. Republicans continue holding a supermajority in both the House and the Senate, after special elections to fill seats of legislators who left.

The GOP gained one Senate seat when Democrat Bill Stone of Holly Springs departed and a Republican, Neil Whaley of Potts Camp, was elected.

Republican Sen. Joel Carter of Harrison County was inaugurated Tuesday to succeed Sean Tindell of Gulfport, who was appointed to a nonpartisan judicial post.

Other new lawmakers were sworn in after winning special elections in 2017.

Their elections did not change the partisan balance of power.

One seat remains open because Republican Rep. John Moore of Brandon resigned in early December. A special election is Feb. 20.
