

Northside students create rock garden to celebrate uniqueness

All photos special to The Clinton Courier

Northside Elementary School started the year with a focus on embracing uniqueness. Principal Mandy Ambrose read a book via iMovie to the entire school on the first day. The book explained that differences are what make each person special. Students then discussed how everyone comes together to make the world beautiful and created a rock garden to be a visual representation of that. Each Northside student painted a rock to represent themselves during art class. Teachers then put the pieces of art together to create the school's rock garden, which serves as a daily reminder that each person is special and unique and that, together, they all make Northside a beautiful place.
