

Arrow boys' cross country team has a bright future

By Danny C. Davis

The Clinton Arrows boys cross country team competed well during the recent fall 2018 season; and, with stellar junior high meet results this year, the future is looking very bright for the Arrow boys' cross country program.

"We started the season with our varsity ranked somewhere around twelfth in the state, and we were ranked as high fifth going into the Class 6A State championship final meet," said Arrow boys head cross country team coach Eric Solis. "We finished the season tenth in the state meet out of thirty-two Class 6A teams. I told the guys that you cannot sum up your season based on the last meet."

The boys' varsity runners did show improvement in the fall of 2018. The season started off by finishing first in the Clinton Short Course meet, followed by a first finish in the JPS XC Challenge out of thirteen teams. The team finished fourth out of sixteen teams in the Clinton Invitational, fifth out of nineteen teams in the Madison Central meet and finished second in the Class 6A Regional meet out of six teams.

According to Solis, the varsity runners were led by seniors Joshun Noel, Jordan Shannon, Glyn Heath and Grant Heath, and junior team leaders included Evan Carite, Jack Maloney and Martinez Bogan.

And the future looks very bright for the varsity runners, after a strong finish this fall by the junior high Arrows.

"I am super excited about our junior high boys," said Solis. "Last year, at the Mid-South Championship, we came in last. Well, this year, we had
