enjoy all facets of recreational flight. The Young Eagles program goal is to allow young people to experience positive activities and discover the possibilities available to them within the world of aviation.

"I fly students age seven through 18 from all over the area on a young eagle flight," he said. "They get a certificate and are registered in the world's largest log book."

The logbook is on permanent display in the EAA AirVenture Museum in Oshkosh, Wis., and online through the Young Eagles website. Young Eagles also have access to an online pilot training course, made possible by Sporty's Pilot Shops, located in Batavia, Ohio.

"It's a way to get kids interested in flying who wouldn't otherwise have a chance to get in a plane," explained Rutter. "It doesn't cost them, the pilots pay for everything."

Chad Kubick, owner of Kubick Aviation Services located at Ford Airport, owns his own plane and shares Rutter's passion for flying.

"We do everything airplane related here, including repair and maintain airplanes, and we also offer private charter flights," said Kubick. "We have been in business 16 years, with four of them here at Ford."

As for me, I hope to be able to fly with Rutter again. . . and soon.
