

Take In A Livestock Show At The Fair

For more than a century, the Clay County Fair has showcased animals raised by area folks of all ages. The fair takes pride in its heritage of offering an abundance of events, activities and opportunities for families. The livestock shows stand out as one of many highlights of the summer festival.

There are animal shows every day of the fair. It's a great place to see an array of animals and watch the young livestock owners and trainers skillfully handle the animals.

The animal shows are for 4-H members, as well as FFA members and those exhibiting in the Open Class division.

Animal science projects guide 4-H and FFA youth in learning about raising, feeding, caring for, judging, training and showing animals. Youth can also explore careers working with animals.

An indication that tradition runs deep at the Clay County Fair is evident by the number of youngsters exhibiting prospect calves, bulls or heifers. Boys and girls, between the ages of four and eight, lead the young cow into the show ring. An older brother, sister or parent are close by to give assistance as needed.

Nonetheless, the young exhibitors are learning about showmanship and the responsibility of bringing an animal to the fair. The memory-making experience is one for all generations to enjoy.

Come, do the same and take in the livestock shows!
