While pointing out that the basic structure is sound, Josh Kraisinger, park department superintendent, noted that drainage issues, leaks, concrete decking failure and other problems have put the facility in constant need of maintenance. After the tour, the committee adjourned to the city office to discuss what was observed with a Wichita pool construction specialist. No immediate decisions were made in the first step of a long process, noted City Manager Brad Eilts. (photos by Mike Gilmore) (Reprinted from Nov. 3, 2017 issue of The Tiller & Toiler)
