

Showstopping irises are on Garner Road

When new catalogs arrive in the cold, wintry months, the pages that display beautiful, colorful, blooms of good things to come are all it takes to get Nancy Thompson's heart aflutter with excitement for the coming Spring season.

It is apparent Thompson spends her sunny days bringing irises and daylilies to life in her home gardens. From show-stopping varieties of irises to daylilies that bring blooms throughout the summer months, this Martin mother and grandmother has a plentiful mix of colors and sizes to suit any flower-lover's tastes – in the garden and throughout the home.

Thompson not only offers these beauties to the general public for sale, she lovingly allows her grandchildren their own special plots of a garden to decorate, plant and take mindful care of throughout the season.

Her flower beds, tucked away off of Garner Road in rural Martin, presents some of the most exquisite irises grown in West Tennessee. These showstoppers are in full bloom with May quickly approaching and the ideal time of year to celebrate the iris in Weakley County.

Thompson has offered varieties of irises in local flower shows and her TLC of her plants shows in the ribbons she brings home from such events.

Sneak peeks of her varieties can be found online at FB at Garner Gardens. But those pictures don't do justice to the velvety feel and close up varieties of colors that can be found throughout Thompson's yard. She spends her months dividing rhizomes and bulbs to make her gardens ever expanding. Guests are welcome and encouraged to shop her flowerbeds and spread the joy that are irises and daylilies of Thompson's gardens.

Stop by for a visit or give her a call at 615-653-9611. Email Thompson at garnergardens101@gmail.com.
