

but soon realized he could do it for himself. Bobby joined him in Fulton when he was just out of high school. By the time Brian graduated in 1999, he had the choice of working in Fulton or Union City, and he chose Union City. The family has spent more than 15 years in their current location.

The second business of customizing cars and trucks came from Bobby's passion and before the craze of lifting and loading trucks with big wheels and accessories had taken its hold in Obion County.

"Bobby would have to go to Kentucky to put on the wheels and tires to get the look he wanted for his own truck," explained Beverly. "So he told us we should do it ourselves."

"Everybody saw what we were doing, and they wanted it, too," added Brian.

"It became a business nobody saw coming," Beverly concluded.

Since 2005 that business has been going so strong that between running it and the car lot, Brian hasn't had a vacation in five years and admits to 14-hour days and having yet to celebrate his recent 11th wedding anniversary.

The success of Midway Motors keeps Brian on the road to auctions and Xtreme Customs' parade of trucks ready for the right touch ensures late nights in the office. But no matter where he is, Brian need only look down to see big brother Bobby's smile.

With a tat of son Caden on the other arm, the continuing LeCornu family story in pictures contin-

Bobby LeCornu's ride is still used by the family and is right at home alongside other trucks awaiting customization. Shown here are K.B. Bell, manager of Xtreme Customs, along with Caden and Brian LeCornu.
