

Executive Board

They've been a team for years now.

Lynn Glover, longtime president of Obion County CornFest, and Glenda Chrisp, CornFest executive director, the organization's treasurer and a volunteer with many years' experience at the helm of the effort, are heading up the board of directors once again as plans for the exciting 2018 Obion County CornFest come together.

With years of business experience to their credit, as well as résumés that include volunteer work and support for community involvement, this team brings talent, time, knowledge and enthusiasm to the table.

When local residents point to the week-plus of community fun and entertainment with pride, they have the executive board to thank for bringing it all together, once again.

Mrs. Glover moved to a home near Obion with her husband, David, about 18 years ago and became involved with the community celebration right away.

Mrs. Chrisp first became active in the effort when she was employed as Main Street Union City's executive director.

Both CornFest executives carry out their responsibilities, which take year-round commitment in some cases, with enthusiasm and excitement about the possibilities.

They understand the importance not only of securing sponsorships to make every CornFest event either free or far more reasonably priced than such entertainment would normally be, but also of involving an array of community volunteers who can bring new ideas and energy to the table and help spread the word about the family-friendly fun.

Mrs. Glover and Mrs. Chrisp will be familiar faces at virtually every 2018 Obion County CornFest event, making sure all is going well and delighting in the happy faces, the excitement of competition and the joy derived from entertainment.

It's what they hope for, year after year. It's what keeps them coming back for more and looking down the road to 2019, even as they wrap things up for this year.

They have a heart for community, and it's on display every year in Obion County.

LYNN GLOVER AND GLENDA CHRISP

Lynn Glover of Troy, wife of David Glover and a partner in Glover Farms, is CornFest's longtime president. She has volunteered with the festival for 15 years. She is also a team leader for Essential Bodywear and an owner, with her husband, of Sweetwater Farms Residential Development in Troy and Glover Farming. They are the parents of two children — Keith and Ginny — and the grandparents of six. She is a member of Obion United Methodist Church.

Glenda Chrisp of Union City, the wife of Tommy Chrisp, has been involved with Obion County CornFest since 1992, beginning during her career with Main Street-Union City. She is a longtime volunteer in many civic causes and is this year's CornFest executive director, treasurer and co-chairman of the Pride of Obion County Luncheon, in addition to serving on the executive board. The Chrisp family includes adult daughters — Stephanie, Gaye and Jan and their spouses — and three grandchildren. She is a member of Union City First United Methodist Church, where she is a member of the choir.
