

CornFest T-shirts

The colors change from year to year, but the distinctive CornFest T-shirt continues to boast the organization's "corny" logo on the front and a listing of the donors who guarantee the annual celebration happens on the back.

This year's T-shirt is a green — just like the corn of the shucks for which the festival is named, whether they select sizes adult small to extra large for $10. The shirts are available at Obion County Public Library and will also be on sale at Family Day in the Park on Sept. 22 if any remain.

"We love spotting the CornFest T-shirts at the celebration's events and all around the county, throughout the year. The distinctive shirts are a wonderful reminder of the fun we all share from year to year at the event that celebrates our local agricultural heritage. We hope those who purchase the shirts, as well as those who simply spot them at an event, will express their appreciation to the many fine sponsors who are listed on the back of each shirt. Without them, there would be no CornFest celebration, so the message conveyed by the shirts is certainly one of appreciation for all they do," said CornFest president Lynn Glover.

STACEY HAYNES AND GLENDA CHRISP

Stacey Haynes of Troy is in charge of the event's colorful T-shirts each year. She has been a CornFest volunteer for five years. She is employed at JD Distributors. She is married to Josh Haynes and they have one son, Walker Haynes. She is a president of Union City J'Cettes, secretary of Obion County Adult Leadership and a member of Young Professionals of Obion County and Obion County Backpack Program Board.
