

This Homebuilt Jackson looks tough and powerful.

four-wheel drive tractor that he rigged together in 1963 with an Oldsmobile engine and a W-9 International rear end, hinged in the middle. In the article, Kieffer, who was the WMSTR president at the time, made the comment, "We have an unusual number of people who have made or modified machinery. It's the way we are made of as a people. We make and change things. It's inherent in a lot of us."

Other examples of "home-built" or "homespun" is Bill Briden of Crookston's curious collection of farm equipment which includes a 4-wheel drive tractor made from two Case rear ends, a Cadillac pick up, and a bulldozer that were featured in 2001.

WMSTR Homebuilt Equipment will draw the most interesting and "one of a kind" pieces of farm equipment from barns all over the country, as well as many enthusiasts. If you have something of interest that you'd like to share, venture over to www.rollag.com for more details.

"It is amazing how it comes together every year because of our members stepping up with Feature and Expo ideas along with maintaining everything else that happens at WMSTR," Mandt concluded.
