

Hill is a two volume set of books printed in 1732 on handmade paper and bound with a sheep skin cover. The books are printed in Latin text with inserts of Hebrew, Greek, and mid-eastern text and records the history of the Reformation of the Christian Church in the 1500s. I was informed that the paper for these books was handmade, one page at a time and the printing was done on a Gutenberg wooden press; a style much older than the iron 1871 Washington Press.

The 2018 edition of the Rollag Pioneer Press will feature Home Built Equipment, "The human brain can make ideas that will use old equipment in new ways. You have to see the items to believe what was created by Government Rules for safety," Ekre wrote.

While the Rollag Pioneer Press newspaper has only been around for twenty-three years, some of its content is well over a century old as the machines that print it, while preserved, are long past their prime.

You are never too young to learn how to make the Pioneer Press.
