Dog days of summer are near

With warm weather here to stay it's safe to say dog owners will have their furry friends along for walks throughout every corner of town.

Dogs may accompany owners anytime on the public right of way; however, all pets must be in direct, effective, physical control once they are off your property, according to the city ordinance titled "Leash Law."

Additionally, all dogs must be on leash within the city parks—including Ervin Park, Wimple Park, and Festival Corner, according to the city park rules. Also, all pet waste must be picked up and disposed of within park limits. And, of course, all dogs—leashed or not—are not permitted onto any of the ball diamonds at Ervin Park.

These rules are in place for the health and safety of all two- and four-legged residents.

Man arrested following Interstate 57 wreck

One man was arrested following two vehicle collisions near Tuscola on Interstate 57 on Tuesday, May 8.

According to Illinois State Police, the initial collision took place at 1:56 p.m. near I-57 Milepost 218 where Jess Plunkett, 41, of Paragould, Ark., was traveling northbound on I-57 in a 2016 Freightliner semi.

Rayna Murphy, 23, Willow Springs; David Simpkins, 65, Newman; Amy Salmon, 41, Monticello; and Gerald Case, 50, Indianapolis were stopped in the right lane due to a traffic backup from a stalled trunk in the roadway. Plunkett failed to stop and caused a rear end collision with the other motorists. He was cited for DUI-drugs and failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Simpkins and Salmon were transported to a local hospital for non-life threatening injuries.

The stopped traffic behind this collision, caused a secondary wreck moments later when Brandon Boyd, 35, Brownsville, Tenn.; Andrew Bergan, 31, Champaign; and Amanda Drummond, 40, Mattoon, were traveling northbound on I-57 near Milepost 217.8 when they approached the first wreck. Bergan and Drummond stopped in the right lane. Boyd struck Bergan who struck Drummond.

Bergan's 2012 Chevrolet caught fire during the incident. He was extricated from the burning vehicle by three motorists and an Illinois State Trooper. Bergan was transported by helicopter to an area hospital for life-threatening injuries. He is recovering. Drummond and her passenger were transported to a area hospital for non-life threatening injuries.

Boyd was cited for failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident.

Throughout the incident response, investigation, and cleanup motorists were directed through Tuscola on US Route 36 to Route 45 where they were rerouted to I-57 near Pesotum.

Members of DAR daytrips to visit the Lincolns

Members of the Stephen A. Douglas Chapter, NSDAR took a whole day to spend a few hours at the Abraham Lincoln Presidential Museum in early May and had their picture taken with the Lincolns! It was a leisurely day to read everything we wanted to read, to watch "Lincoln's

Eyes" (special effects theater) and the "Ghosts of the Library" in the Holavision Theater, and to view the newest exhibit "From Illinois to the White House" (Lincoln, Grant, Reagan, Obama). Great way to celebrate The Illinois Bicentennial.

CITY COUNCIL

that it hasn't had for quite some time; quality, upscale-casual, family-friendly places to gather," Hogue's business proposal said. "I plan to take what I've learned during my 15 year career in nationally acclaimed restaurants and distill it into an approachable, comfortable environment that serves great food and unique libations with Midwestern sensibilities."

Irma Lou's is, of course, named after Hogue's grandmother.

"...I want this restaurant to be as welcoming, returnable, and delicious as her kitchen was," the proposal says. "There was never any pretension about the food, everyone was invited and there was always great conversation. Diners should feel like they've been invited over to someone's house for dinner in a warm, classy, comfortable space that immediately makes them feel at home."

The restaurant will feature an open kitchen to display the excitement of the kitchen and the façade will feature large windows to give the effect of al fresco dining.

The sister business, The Cast Iron Pub plans to have a similar feel—a comfortable space for friends and family to enjoy.

"It will be as fitting to have a drink after work as it will be for watching the big game on the weekend or having an evening out with friends," the proposal says. The menu will include hand-crafted cocktails, a large craft beer selection, and a wine list that will feature local favorites as well as a selection of those that aren't as easily found in the area.

The bar will feature outdoor seating and a back room that can be rented out for special events and meetings.

The city's TIF grant will foot the bill for the restaurant and bar remodel; however, the remaining balance of the $549,899 project, including a second floor apartment remodel, will come from owner investments.

In other business, the council heard a heartfelt farewell from longtime City of Tuscola police officer Cliff Ponder. In recent years, Ponder has stepped down from his fulltime role on the force, but has stayed active as a part-time officer. However, he's at a point with his business that he has issued his official resignation.

"It's been awesome here," he said. "I can remember wanting to be a part of this agency when I was in high school and I am struggling with stepping aside now, but it's the right time. I will miss working for the city, and I greatly appreciate everything that Chief Hastings has done for all of us. He is a man of integrity and has also had a huge part in making this the best job I ever had."

He thanked the council for the opportunity to serve the city throughout the past decades.

"My father used to say to me that there is no other place in the entire world where the security and the rights of 5,000 people are more important than they are right here in Tuscola, Ill. He told me to take this job very seriously if I was going to step away from the family farm to do it."

In other business, City Administrator Drew Hoel explained the $168,500 discrepancy in the Joint Water Agency billing with the City of Arcola.

"Back in 2007 the Joint Water Agency, which is Arcola and Tuscola together, entered into an agreement to sell water to West Prairie Water Company," Hoel explained. "The City of Arcola sold the first 100,000 gallons per day, that agreement had been in place some years prior to that, and starting in 2007 the Joint Water Agency sold up to 150,000 gallons per day."

In 2010 a second water meter, unbeknownst to Tuscola officials, was installed from Arcola's pipeline. West Prairie interconnected with the supply line at that second point, Hoel explained.

"The error was that Arcola did not report to us the second meter readings, only the first," he said. "I think it was an honest error. There internal procedures are such that they send us the meter readings every week, and they kept doing that, except for now there was another meter."

The result of that oversight is a fairly substantial amount of water that should have been billed by the Joint Water Agency rather than by the City of Arcola.

"We have gone back and reconciled that," Hoel said. "We first met with the Joint Agency Board to inform them of the issue. We informed you in writing, then (City Treasurer) Alta (Long) and her counterpart in Arcola reconciled those figures independently. It's extremely complex accounting and billing going back eight or nine years. We were hoping they would get somewhere within the same ballpark, and I was absolutely shocked to learn they got to within $66 of each other."

The water agency will work with a third-party, independent accounting firm to verify the amount owed before the City of Arcola begins work to repay the agency.

"The impact of that affects the fund balance of the joint agency," Hoel said. "The most current number we have is that Arcola owns about 47 percent of the Joint Water Agency and 53 percent of it is owned by us. When people use terms like they owe us, it's not entirely true."

"Arcola has acknowledged their error, and they have been good to work with," Hoel added. "I don't want to portray this as any animosity between our staffs. They made an honest mistake, and they are working with us to get to the bottom of it."

Also, the council waived formal bidding for the end bearings replacement before approving a service proposal with DPS Equipment Services, Inc. in the amount of $25,500.
