wife Brandi Stewart Adams.

City employees were given plaques in recognition of their service at an event that was part training meeting, part Christmas party. Recognized were: Neva Lou Reagan- 15 years; accounts payable; Lenneth Bryant- 5 years; sanitation driver; Ty Hammer- 5 years; police department (officer); Sarah Walker- 5 years; police department (dispatch); Cory Aubin- 1 year; recycling & sanitation; Eric England- 1 year; sanitation driver; Gabrielle Hagan- 1 year; police department (dispatcher); Ashley Pennington- 1 year; City Clerk; Sharon Walker- 1 year; police department (dispatcher); Kelly White- 1 year; maintenance department; Jordan Page- 1 year; police department (officer), James Vickery- 1 year; water treatment plant operator; Claudie Jenkins- 1 year; sanitation driver; Josh Coleman- 1 year; sewer plant operator; Justin Brown- 1 year; sanitation & recycling; Kelly Lamb- 1 year; sanitation & recycling, and Michael Mackey- 1 year; water & sewer department.

On Facebook, reactions to the police department recognition were a long and heartfelt string of thank yous. The reaction to the city gathering? Just one, from honoree and sewer plant operator Josh Coleman.

“Lol,” said Coleman, using Internet slang for “Laughing out loud.”

Hey Josh. We’d all be in a bad way without you.

meeting, the City of Tompkinsville held an Oath of Office Ceremony for new and returning officials and expressed their gratitude for the service of departing commissioners Bobby Adams and Sherry Crawford. Sworn back in to begin new terms in a room full of colleagues and well-wishers were Anita Hamilton-Bartlett and Teena Cain, along with their newly elected colleagues Beth Cross and Tommy York.

Mayor Scotty Turner was sworn in to begin his second four-year term. Earlier in the afternoon, he and incoming Judge/Executive Mitchell Page -- opponents in last year’s Republican primary for the job Page ultimately won -- were spotted chatting in Turner’s office, ironing out a minor snafu. “Politics is politics and when it’s over, it’s over,” said Page, as Turner nodded. “You can expect to find us working together on all kinds of stuff.”

Fiscal Court recognized its retiring officials -- Judge/Executive Tommy Willett, Magistrate Alonzo Ford, and Magistrate Karen Gordon, as well as payroll clerk Sheila Sheffield -- in a brief but emotional ceremony at the final 2018 meeting on December 20, and held a swearing-in ceremony early on New Year’s Eve day.

The city oath was administered by City Attorney Richard Jackson. Fountain Run Mayor Larry Shaw joined in the Tville proceedings, as Fountain Run’s formalities had been interrupted by an emergency.

“Scotty and I are honored to serve the city we love for another four years,” said Tompkinsville’s first lady, Susan Brooks Turner. “Please pray for our city and those in leadership positions throughout our county.”
