Vacation and Retirement: Different Goals Require Different Investment Strategies

To achieve any of your financial objectives, you need to save and invest – that much is clear. But just how you save and invest may differ from goal to goal. Let's look at two common goals to see the differences in your savings and investment strategies.

The first goal we'll consider is a dream vacation – one lasting a couple of weeks or more, possibly to an exotic locale. So, for the investments you've designated to fund this vacation, you need two key attributes: liquidity and low risk. The liquidity requirement is pretty self-explanatory – you want to be able to get to your vacation funds exactly when you need them, and you don't want to be slapped with some type of early withdrawal or tax penalty.

The low-risk part of your vacation strategy means you want investments that won't drop in value just when you need to sell them to use the proceeds for your trip. However, you need to be aware that those types of stable-value investment vehicles likely will not offer much growth potential. As you may know, the investments with the greatest possible rewards are also those that carry the highest degrees of risk. Yet, by starting to invest early enough in more conservative investments, and putting away money regularly, you may be able to compensate for the lack of growth opportunities.

Now, let's turn to your other goal – retirement. When you are saving for retirement, your primary objective is pretty simple: to accumulate as much money as you can. Consequently, you will need a reasonable percentage of your portfolio devoted to growth-oriented investments. But what's a reasonable percentage? There's no one-size-fits-all solution – the amount of growth investments in your portfolio should be based on several factors, including your age, risk tolerance and projected retirement lifestyle.

Furthermore, this percentage may need to change over time. When you're just starting out in your career, you may be able to afford to take on the greater risk that comes with having a higher percentage of your portfolio in growth investments. But as you get closer to retirement, you might want to begin shifting some dollars toward more conservative vehicles – you don't want to be over-exposed to the volatility of the financial markets just when you need to start selling investments to help fund your retirement.

Nonetheless, you won't want to give up all growth investments, even during your retirement years. You could spend two or three decades as a retiree, and over that time, inflation could take a big toll on your purchasing power. To counter this effect, you will need to own some investments that have the potential at least to equal, and ideally outpace, the cost of living.

The examples of taking that extensive vacation and enjoying a long retirement illustrate the importance of recognizing that you will have many goals in life – and you'll need to prioritize and plan for them, sometimes following significantly different investment strategies. When you do, you'll give yourself a better chance of reaching your destinations.

May 2019, God's Food Pantry has proudly served 1,356 families. As a non-profit corporation, the company is run by a board of directors and staffed by 15 regular volunteers. Volunteer Kathy Hammond stated, "We are always looking for and accepting volunteers to come and help out."

Along with food and monetary donations from individuals, organizations, and churches in the community, the pantry has also partnered with Kroger in Russell Springs and Feeding America to provide food for the boxes. However, much like many businesses, there is a fast and slow season. Summer is the pantry's slow season, which means there are fewer of the essential donations needed to keep the shelves stocked. This ultimately affects how much each household can receive, to which John Veigel states, "If we have extra, we give extra."

The pantry receives an average of two thousand (2000) to three thousand (3000) pounds of food per month in donations, as well as an additional one thousand (1000) pounds of food, on average, from Kroger to serve to its clients. If you would like to donate, drop by the pantry during their business hours with either in-date food products or a monetary donation. "It's how we survive," Veigel adds. "We don't give away out of date food," which appears to be a common negative stigma, "If we won't eat it, we won't serve it."

The pantry is located on 55 Dan Street in Russell Springs and is open: Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 12:00-

Volunteer Kathy Hammond, prepares a box of food to be served.

4:00 p.m.

For those that wish to receive donations from the pantry, there are a few guidelines for qualification.

- You must live in Russell County.
- You must fill out an application and information card completely.
- You must not have a total income after bills that exceed eligibility guidelines.
- A Picture ID will be required to receive a box of food.

- A current bill showing a current address to prove residency is required. The bill must show the name of the client and the current address of the client who is seeking assistance. (A rental receipt with a phone number to verify residency in Russell County is also acceptable).

For those that meet these qualifications, you can receive one (1) box of food per household, once every thirty (30) days.
