

A Look Back In Time FROM MY WINDOW

JULY 11, 1974
By I. C. TOOWELL

After a few days of rest, ole IC has returned with sunburned back, completely exhausted, financially busted, and very thankful the rest is over. There is nothing like a few days rest to make one appreciate the days of work.

While our column was rather short and vacant last week, we do have a few items of interest to report. We have been told that our often mentioned buddy, Dr. Joe T Pettey, just recently celebrated his 25th wedding anniversary. We might add that Mrs. Pettey also celebrated her 25th anniversary and we assume that Mrs. Pettey has more to celebrate than Joe after all those years of keeping Joe straight and headed in the right direction.

Our report did not tell the identity of the culprits bearing the gift, but we heard Joe received one anniversary gift in the form of a crutch. The truth hurts sometime but is nothing like giving a gift that is useful.

A story is going around town about our buddy, Adrian Selby. We have been told that Adrian is considering taking night employment as a watch man. It sees that Adrain, the wife, and some friends were making use of the lake with their houseboat and Adrian's fancy and fast speed boat. We are told that he Selbys, after a day of water fun, retired for the night in their houseboat with the speed boat secured to the rails right under the window where they slept.

After a good night's sleep, they arose to find that some mean and slick culprit had stolen the speed boat right from under their nose. Then, to make things worse, they returned to the dock, only to find that the thieves had returned to the dock, stole the trailer that went with the boat, and also had stolen the hitch from the Selby car.

Things ended on a better note, as the boat and trailer were found in the county where the culprits had abandoned it after having a flat on the trailer.

Van and Brenda Robertson, according to John and Mary Colson, are rapidly becoming the ski champions of Lake Cumberland. Only two small obstacles stand in their way. Van has the problem of forgetting to let go the rope when he takes a fall, plus the fact that he forgets to close his mouth, Brenda, who normally wears contact lenses, is afraid of skiing with her lenses, but cannot see the boat without them.

Some of my thoughts

Ron Cowell

I write a lot about the past and getting older. This week I'd like to write about some things I think about and I wonder if I'm the only one who thinks about these things as I get older. I doubt very much I am the only one to have these thoughts but I decided to write about them anyway. I'm pretty sure there is some reader out there that thinks the same way about the same things.

Music was a big part of my life. From the time I was 13 I was playing in bands with a lot of different musicians who are now spread out all over the country and I'm still in touch with several of them BUT there are still some of them I often wonder "where are they now, are they still alive, how do I get in touch with them and even more important, where do I start looking for them.

Even childhood friends cross my mind and I wonder where they are and if they are still living. You know, the kid you hung with when you were just an elementary school student, or that first love of your life, what ever happened to them.

In 2015 our class of Waite High School in Toledo had our 50th class reunion. There were a lot of kids in my class, if I'm not mistaken there were over 500. I got back in touch with several and we remain in touch through facebook. What I found strange when I went to the reunion some of them I hung with in school looked down there nose at me or acted like they didn't remember me, yet others I hardly knew came up and talked and acted like we were long lost friends but we had so much fun we decided to get together again in a couple years.

One of the guys contacted me and said it was about time we all get together again. Apparently at the 50th reunion some got talking and arguing about politics and other things and because of political differences, and other beliefs from problems today some refused to come if we got together again.

I couldn't help but think, what's wrong with all of us today they will let things that are happening today and different beliefs today make us all not want to get together again with friends and classmates we have not seen in years. I guess I could never understand that attitude of someone being better than someone else.

Old friends are a lot like families also. Before super highways and the internet it seemed families stayed together in the same town. Now we all get older and spread out all over the country. I myself have a niece in Toledo, Ohio, I have a sister who lives in Michigan and cousins that I was close to as kids that I have no idea where they are now. As I get older that bothers me.

Another thing is after I turned 70 I started things about my parents a lot and even though we had a good relationship there are times I wish I would have treated them better. I was one of those who moved away and for several years I only saw them a couple times a year and most of our contact was by telephone. There are some families today I understand who live in the same town and still don't get together. Things have become more important than family, like the grandkids activities, work and other things. I just don't understand.

I actually know one set of grandparents that have two beautiful grandkids, one in his teens and the other married and had children of her own. These grandparents have NEVER got to babysit their grandkids. Never able to take them two McDonalds or do anything with them. When these people ask their child why this was the statement was made they his wife didn't want the kids out of her sight and the son said "its easier to do what my wife wants than to argue with her. Again I don't understand what has happened to people and families these days.

I'm ask every once in a while "wouldn't you like to be young again"? My response is, the only way I would want to be young again is if things were like they were when I was young"! Today we live in a society that when something comes about the first thought is "What's in it for me". Oh well just a few of my thoughts for this week, Till next time, be nice to someone you haven't seen in a long time and Keep Cruizen!

Ask Dr. Angelia Love Your Family

"The bond that links your family is not one of blood, but of respect and joy in each other's life." - Richard Bach

Family relationships are complicated and, if that were not enough, they are ever changing, ever evolving through developmental cycles and altered through divorces and death. Families are in a constant state of flux and reformation through life events. In a society of constant change, families move from their home community and families are further fragmented. Just when a family reaches homeostasis, comfort, consistency, and, possible complacency, something or someone changes everything - and we start the process to bring the family back into balance.

The social, emotional, intellectual developmental stages are the predictable transitions from childhood to senior adulthood. Throughout the lifespan we grow within the family system. The family life system, challenges, supports and aids in the transition to the next stage in the cycle. Without challenges, the family system tends to stagnate. It is through the challenges, faced within the system where family members to grow, change, rebuild and mature with new skills to face the next set of life cycle changes.

Erik Erikson (1959) postulated growth-related stages where the mastery of skill sets and developmental milestones allow for successful transition from one stage of development to the next. If one does not master the skill set, theoretically, you may still move to the next phase of the cycle, but more likely to encounter social anxiety, difficulty with relationships and future adjustment without intervention.

Life experiences through the family system will affect personal perspective and success. Erikson claimed we all inadvertently experience "crisis and intrapsychic conflict" when faced with developmental tasks. Developmental crisis, challenges and conflict can be a painful and prolonged process. Ultimately, the developmental cycle is dependent on the distress, discomfort, discomposure and discombobulation for the necessary outcome - growth and metamorphosis into the next developmental stage.

"Feelings of worth can flourish only in an atmosphere where individual differences are appreciated, mistakes are tolerated, communication is open, and rules are flexible -- the kind of atmosphere that is found in a nurturing family" -- Virginia Satir

Families are the major source of life gratification. Be assured, you can improve your family's quality of life at any stage. Self-examination, education, and perhaps counseling are ways to improve relationships. No matter what the stress and struggles, the family is there to help one another battle through the trials, make to the other side and celebrate this amazing life together.

Last week, my family came together for the July 4th holiday weekend. I continue to be amazed at how we all get along, both the in-laws and out-laws. Families are a mix of the sweet with a taste of bitter. And I always remember, like them, I continue to evolve into the person I am becoming. I'm not who I want to be; I'm definitely not who I once was.

My prayer for you is that you cherish your family - blemishes and all! Finally, Give and be Grateful in all things, Live in Peace, Faith and Grace. Enjoy a Larger than Life - Life. Love God and Love every Person. Amen.
