

Superintendent Davenport

Fourth grade student Brayden Davenport played an important role last week; Davenport was Superintendent of Green County Schools Jan. 15. Superintendent Davenport started his morning by visiting with each administrator in the central office. In each office he learned about their role and responsibilities to gain insight regarding everything it takes to operate a public school district. He traveled along with Board of Education Chair Marcy Goff and his predecessor, Superintendent Hodges, to an important regional meeting that included representatives from surrounding districts. After lunch, Mr. Davenport conducted site-visits at each of the four schools in the district hearing from the principals about the major challenges and celebrations that their buildings and students experience. He concluded his day by giving the “all-loaded” radio call for the final flight of buses leaving Green County Intermediate School. Davenport, the son of Ben and Jennifer Davenport, was given this opportunity after winning the “Superintendent for a Day” auction item at the Green County Intermediate School Fall Festival.
