Louisville Native Brad Palmer, who recently celebrated 35 years of ordainment, made the move from Tennessee to Greensburg where he has been named preacher for Ebenezer Presbyterian Church and Greensburg Presbyterian Church.

For over two years, the churches have been in the process of becoming a share ministry once again, and they have finally succeeded in doing so.

The first church Palmer served at following his ordainment was a Native American Congregation in North Dakota. Alongside his wife, Sherry, of almost 34 years, the couple stayed with the Native American congregation for two years.

Their love of life, God, and one another has allowed for many adventures over the course of their marriage. Palmer made it clear early on that they know just how lucky they are.

In 1990, the couple adopted a son. Charley Palmer, a lover of movies and activities, was diagnosed with Down Syndrome at birth. Brad and Sherry were unfazed by the diagnosis. As a family, they've made sure to become involved in the Special Olympics, the Buddy Walk, and Sherry even published a book, "Life with Charley."

The book tells the story of a clergy couple adopting a baby with Down Syndrome, the challenges, and the profound impact it has on those who open their hearts to unconditional love.

So far, the Palmers have enjoyed their relocation in Greensburg. "Everyone here has been so welcoming," Brad stated. "They have a shared excitement with us."

Brad has big plans for the future in regards to the churches and our community. He is already beginning to get to know the people of Greensburg by becoming an active member of the community.

"I would like to grow the churches, bring new members in, and build a continued success," said Palmer. "Shared ministry maintains its own autonomy."

Palmer and his family are committed to the youth ministry as well. He would like to move beyond traditional youth ministry and begin including the youth in leadership, as well as encouraging more service.

Small communities like ours must be able to rely on those within it. Palmer hopes to give back to the community, and he believes that many seeds have already been planted.

The Palmers invite everyone to attend Greensburg Presbyterian Church March 17 at 2:00p.m. CST where Brad Palmer will officially be installed. A reception will follow directly at Ebenezer Presbyterian Church. Ebenezer will also host an Ash Wednesday Service this evening at 6:30 p.m. CST.
