

Class Reunion

My best friend from grammar school and I are taking on the task of planning our 75th something class reunion. We have done this once before and it was certainly an overwhelming mission. It has been so many years now that some of us have gone on home and we are still scattered to the winds. It is hard to track down everyone but track down we will! My memories are so vivid and clear of our first years together. The little school house up on the hill where administration offices now sit was our first and second grade. A big auditorium with a stage for our little dramas, and flanking each side were classrooms. The right side first grade and the other side second grade. I can close my eyes and remember the smell, such good memories. I can, ashamedly, tell you these were my distressed days, the days I was afraid to leave my mama and I ran away and tried all sorts of escapes during my first two years in this little school. Ms. Annie Smythe was our principle and she didn't take too much chaos from me or anyone. Most of the children I began here in these rooms followed me all the way through my senior year. From this school we moved across the street into the big menacing three story structure sitting where our Attala County Library sits. First floor was for third grade, I handled that pretty well. Then on to the second (Continued on page 9.)
