

Back to School Salsa

For some reason or other I still get those butterflies of anxiety each year this time rolls around as school begins. Perhaps it was because as a child I NEVER got sick in the summer time but let me tell you as soon as I knew I had to go back to school, my ill health became a true issue. I began to have headaches, sore throats, and my goodness at the stomach aches I suffered. My mother called my condition "school-itis". I am not sure what the accurate term was, but I just know it caused me to jump off the school bus when we stopped to pick up the next rider, run away from school to go to my daddy's workplace, and be able to throw-up on command. It was horrendous. I am certainly thankful that my grandchildren are not wracked with this dreadful disease, only cured by a little green keen switch from a china-berry tree. Of course, my grandchildren are dreading the end of summer, but who isn't? I don't have any "babies" beginning school this year. We have four college students, six in high school, one in Jr. high, and two middle-schoolers. I am anticipating that they will somehow enjoy this learning time and not try some of the troublesome things I tried during my school years. I will not elaborate on the shenanigans I stepped into because really, I just don't want everyone to know!

I believe for some reason as our children reach their teens time just quickens as the years seem to fly by. I can remember when our oldest grandson was in diapers trying to get his tricycle into my refrigerator to cool it down because it had been in the sun and was too hot to ride. Then he went from kindergarten to sophomore in college in too fast a time.

I have three that will start driving a car this year. That thought just frightens me more than my going to school did. That means that three daddies will be car shopping before too much longer and three "little boys" will be driving a big vehicle and their Meme can have a new problem to worry about. I realize that we are living life. One day they were born, just a tiny little newborn and it seems as if the next thing I knew they were driving off to college and next will be weddings and a family of their own. Then they can have these feeling of melancholy I am dealing with each time one of their "babies" have 'school-itis' and jump off the school bus.

Having an abundance of juicy red acid filled tomatoes this year, I have tried a new recipe for Salsa.....

BACK TO SCHOOL SALSA

- 1/4 medium peeled onion
- 2 T. diced jalapenos
- 2 peeled cloves of garlic
- 1 jar of home-made canned tomatoes or a can from the grocery store
- 1/2 fresh lime
- 1/2 t. salt
- 2 T. cilantro

Add onion, jalapeno and garlic to the bowl of a food processor. Pulse until the bits are your desired size. Open cover and scrape down sides and add remaining ingredients. Pulse a few more times to combine. Keep in refrigerator and it get better the next day.
