Northside Baptist Church to celebrate fiftieth anniversary

Special to The Clinton Courier

Northside Baptist Church, Clinton, will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary, Sunday, July 21, with its first fulltime pastor, James Porch, retired executive director of the Tennessee Baptist Mission Board, preaching and joining others in telling tales of the church's beginnings.

The celebration will include the story-telling at 9 a.m., worship at 10:30, and a barbecue lunch at noon. Guests eat free.

Since January, the church has had other former pastors as visiting preachers, including Stan Wilson, John Stanley, James Byrd and John Hendrix.

Charter member Wilma Hemphill said that First Baptist and Morrison Heights churches did a survey of the northern end of the city. The result was twenty-five families enrolling in the new church. The charter of July 20, 1969, contains sixty-nine signatures.

That year, Hinds Baptist Association gave the fledgling church five acres, two trailers and a tent.

"We like to have burned up in that tent - and fought wasps - that summer," said Hemphill, who added that her then-eleven-year-old daughter, Becky, made the church's first profession of faith in Jesus.

George Dale, chair of the anniversary committee, said that among Northside's ministries, the Tuesday night Clinton High School football ministry is most satisfying to him. About forty show up for each meeting. Recently, $1,200 in college scholarships were awarded to students.

Senior pastor Courtney Stamey said, "Northside has been a consistent presence in our community for half a century. If Northside has touched your life in any way, come and celebrate with us."

Northside Baptist Church is located at 1475 East Northside Drive in Clinton.
