John Grogan of Clinton will be leaving in September for a three-month rotational assignment at Nokia Bell Labs, the world-renowned research organization in information technology and communications, as part of a joint fellowship program between the companies and two of Mississippi's leading universities.

The C Spire-Nokia Bell Labs Fellowship Program, now in its third year, offers college students majoring in computer science and computer or electrical engineering the opportunity to conduct relevant industry research alongside some of the world's leading scientists, engineers and technologists.

A senior at Mississippi State University, Grogan was among three student winners chosen from among a plethora of finalists that participated in the 2018-2019 program. Grogan was hired by C Spire following his graduation in May.

Grogan, an information security analyst and Clinton native, plans to focus on security during his upcoming stint at Nokia Bell Labs in Murray Hill, New Jersey. He will be part of the third pair of C Spire employees to get a chance to work side-by-side with some of the world's leading researchers.

"These team members are some of our best and brightest and represent future leaders in our industry," said C Spire CTO Carla Lewis. "This experience allows them to hone their professional skills by working on real projects that will make a difference and have an impact on the way in which we serve and support our customers."

The Mississippi-based diversified telecommunications and technology services company has long supported academic excellence in colleges and universities, but in recent years also has focused on working with educators, schools and community-based training programs to help students and learners transition into the workforce and turn their education and training into a professional career.

"It's a great way to get exposed to the future of technology, work with some of the most innovative technologists in the world and use these advanced technologies to better serve our customer's needs," Lewis said, adding that the prestigious fellowship program is seeking rising senior-year students and masters' candidates with at least a 3.0 grade point average and a demonstrated interest in the fields of communications and information technology.
