

Treats trump tricky snow

The village of Cambridge, like many other rural communities, maintains its Halloween tradition by holding Trick-or-Treat during the evening hours from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m., just as twilight sets in for a gradual, spooky shift into the utter darkness of fallen night, where costumed figures could collide with the more ghastly and less well-disguised. On Oct. 31, 2019, in Cambridge, kids in packs with parents and friends dressed up in costumes covering winter clothing to face the frigid temperatures and confront the other costumed marauders—all bent on candy acquisition at any cost.

1. The Servais family braved the cold as an adventurous unit.

2. Dressed against the cold a large group of Halloween beggars come calling.

3. A werewolf and companions seem to smile from the steps to a welcoming home.

4. The cutest lion flanked by the cutest of bunnies. 5. Spaceship parked in back, this rocket-gal was exploring a Cambridge neighborhood for rumored candy on Halloween.

Enforcement of 'Made in USA' labeling standards urged by Baldwin

From Baldwin Press

U.S. Senators Tammy Baldwin (D-WI), Sherrod Brown (D-OH), Richard Blumenthal (D-CT), and Christopher Murphy (D-CT) are urging the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) to use its existing statutory authority to issue and enforce Made in the USA labeling regulations. Although the FTC has the statutory authority to issue regulations, which would strengthen its enforcement efforts, it has not done so and instead has taken a weaker approach to enforcement.

The Senators are calling on FTC to issue a rule that cracks down on violators and sends a message that abusive mislabeling practices by defrauders will no longer be accepted.

"We urge the Commission to issue a rule as part of a strengthened enforcement of the Made in the USA standard. A rulemaking promulgated under the Administrative Procedure Act would allow the Commission to codify the current Made in the USA standard and, more importantly, clarify when violators will face civil penalties," the Senators wrote in a letter to FTC Commissioners.

In October of 2018, the Senators wrote to the FTC and referenced instances where companies had fraudulently affixed "Made in America" labels to foreign-made products. The Senators said mislabeling products not only misleads consumers but also harms American businesses. The Senators urged the FTC to consider monetary penalties as well as admission of guilt settlements for companies that import products from countries like China and then commit these label violations.

The Senators followed-up in February, demanding increased transparency and stronger enforcement against violators, in addition to requesting additional information regarding the FTC's enforcement actions against companies that commit "Made in the USA" labeling violations, since little information has been available to date.

FATAL ACCIDENT

Initial investigation shows that the tractor was being driven by an 18-year-old male from Garden Prairie, Ill., when the victim attempted to exit the moving tractor. As the victim exited the tractor, it is believed he slipped on a mud covered ladder and fell to the ground and was then struck by the rear tire of the tractor. The farm workers on scene immediately called for emergency services and attempted CPR until the arrival of emergency personnel.

At this time the investigation is on-going, but no foul play is suspected. The identity of the victim will be released at a later time, pending notification of the family.
