Ask a Trooper

Question: I have a North Dakota Commercial Driver's License (CDL) "Class A" permit. But my employer is in the Minnesota area. Can I legally drive on my "Class A" CDL permit in the state of Minnesota if I have a licensed CDL "Class A" driver with me, in the Minnesota area to get my behind-the-wheel experience? Or do I have to be in the state of North Dakota for my permit to be valid?

Answer: Your North Dakota CDL Permit is valid in any state where you are driving, if all the rest of the requirements have been met (age, medically qualified, restrictions, etc.)

The State Patrol Commercial Vehicle Section is comprised of civilian commercial vehicle inspectors and state troopers. They work together to conduct commercial vehicle safety inspections and weighing at highway weigh stations and roadside locations throughout the state.

Under the Commercial Vehicle Section, the Office of Pupil Transportation Safety is responsible for performing periodic and random inspections of school buses operated in the state. Commercial Vehicle Section personnel also facilitate training and outreach programs to inform drivers and carriers of rules and regulations, including certifying technicians and mechanics to perform annual inspections under the state's Mandatory Inspection Program.

Weather Local Forecast by Meteorologist Mark Anthony

Winter has been trying hard to hold on across parts of Minnesota. On Saturday, snow fell across southern Minnesota. There were reports of four inches of snow in Hadley in Murray County on Saturday, as an area low pressure pushed across Iowa and brought snow to the region. In addition, Harmony, in southeastern Minnesota, picked up three inches of snow!

Then on Sunday into Monday, portions of northern Minnesota were under a winter weather advisory for snow. This advisory was in effect from Sunday night into Monday evening for snow and blowing snow.

Much of the rest of the region had off and on rain showers Sunday into Monday. The heaviest rain fell across portions of central Minnesota.

Expect some additional rain to move into Minnesota on Wednesday. Spotty rain will be possible again on Thursday into Friday. Temperatures will also remain below average through Thursday.

The good news is that temperatures will moderate by Friday and into the weekend. We should return to more seasonal temperatures by the weekend! Highs should climb back into the low to mid 60s!

May is here so the snow chances will soon be over, well at least until this fall!

Enjoy the rest of the week!

Weather history:

On this date in 1935 records show that a late snow and ice storm hit parts of Minnesota. The heaviest ice accumulations were "between St. Paul and Forest Lake." The Twin Cities "reported three inches of snow!" There were reports of power lines down!

Weather fact:

Did you know that "an extra half-inch of ice covering a power line can add up to 500 pounds of weight?"
