So would any of you will not have an underother people knowing that the probability spending the rest of your days there is likely? I guess this a real plan from what I've seen lately in the news. If you haven't heard about this, here's some of the basics to think about if your tempted. From what I've seen so far my advice to you is to wait for about the third transport leaving earth, and here's why. The first group that arrives will have to establish the colony residence buildings. I'm pretty sure that means that if your one of the first to arrive you get to be the group that set get to be the group that sets facilities up for the future arrivals.
So the first earthly marthe restroom facilities for the themselves and future arrivals. This is one duty I for sure want figured out before I get there. I'm not real sure how the gravity earth, but I want here on without question that when I flush everything goes down and not up in the room when I'm in there Will there be a ceiling exhaust fan? I hope so, but who knows. Is the Mars air pure enough to provide a spring fresh scent in the after you? Hmmm, it better I assume there will be a collection tank somewhere nearby for waste collection What happens when that gets full? Just asking because you know, there won't be a truck stopping by once a week to take it to wherever. And being th

Scholarship winners have something common: they have a love for agriculture and want to pursue that passion as a career.
For Mark Snider o Tuscola, he knew what pro fession he wanted to pursue in college-agriculture. "I came to notice the immense importance that the agricul tural industry has on the plentiful well as having ties for career opportunials.
