J.M. (Mike) Flenniken

Heaven was surely blessed in receiving John Michael ("Mike") Flenniken on July 1, 2019.

Mike was born in Monticello on April 29, 1951. Mike always kept an open heart to those that were less fortunate and went out of his way to help all who crossed his path. From assisting family members with sound advice when the worst of times struck to volunteering many hours to the St. Mary Outreach Program, Mike never slowed down in generously serving others.

Mike was a devoted loving husband to his wife of 35 years and loving father to four children. There was absolutely nothing he would not do for those he loved so very much.

It would seem that Mike breathed green. Being raised in a strong farming community, he began his profession at John Deere (Deere & Company) early in life and remained dedicated to the company for his entire career as a brilliant engineer and manager which took him to places all around the world. Mike retired as Director of Engineering and Technology. Mike utilized his brilliance not only for his career but was self-taught in so many needed projects for his family and friends.

Mike was a true outdoorsman loving nature, gardening and hunting with his dog Rose and friends. The world would be hard pressed to find a man more self-driven, goal-oriented, energetic, accepting, and generous. Mike will be dearly missed by all who knew him.

Mike is preceded in death by his brother Charles Flenniken, father John Flenniken, and son-in-law Mark Krueger. He is survived by his wife Grace Flenniken, daughter Michelle Flenniken (Blake), Son Eric Flenniken, daughter Michelle Hernandez, son Vincent McCoy, (Carol), mother Mary Lou Flenniken, sisters, Cindy Flenniken and Ann Brewer, and eight grandchildren.

Gatherings in Mike's honor will be held on July 27, 2019 at St. Mary Catholic Church 902 Crawford Road, Rock Hill, SC 29730, beginning with a visitation with the family at 9:30 am followed by a mass beginning at 10:30 a.m. A small reception will be held immediately following the service. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to St. Mary Outreach Program.

With ROSC, Blackwell says he hopes to be able to direct patrons to the services they need more efficiently.

Blackwell says sitting at the ROSC Council table, he has learned in more detail the services provided within the county including youth services at the RISE Behavioral Health. He has also worked with Rosecrance located in Champaign County with the possibility of bringing grant-funded substance abuse treatment to the Douglas County Jail.

"That's a connection that wouldn't have been made without ROSC discussions though it's separate from ROSC work," Blackwell said.

Blackwell says he has classmates and childhood friends who, since graduation, have become addicted to illegal substances—something he says isn't rare in Douglas County communities.

"It's not uncommon to find someone who is addicted to narcotics to then commit property crimes to help support their habit," Blackwell said. "It's, unfortunately, pretty common in Douglas County. It affects everyone."

The idea behind ROSC is being inclusive and that includes pathways to recovery, Hays said. "We're not saying the only way to get sober is the 12-step recovery program, because people get sober in church, people get sober through art therapy, people get sober through music, and all of that is OK. All pathways of recovery are able to sit at that table."

As the conversations continue in the county, Hays says one of the areas to address is the lesser-discussed problem—children of parents living with drug and alcohol addiction.

"If the children live in that, that becomes all they know and if that's how they believe life is then chances are they will follow suit," Hays said. "How can we provide primary intervention in these children's lives via school or public health? When there is a family member who is sick from substance abuse it touches every other family member; the whole family is sick. That means the children are sick, too."

RISE Behavioral Health Director Lauren Christina has been a part of the ROSC Council discussion since its start in Douglas County.

"It's been great to sit down and talk with all the key holders in the county to learn what issues everyone else sees," Christina says. "We have a unique perspective because we are mental health. I certainly didn't know everyone at the table, so we started the conversation to see how mental health can fit in to the puzzle."

She said that the discussion has helped the community leaders draw connections in an effort to efficiently direct residents to the correct services at the correct location.

The open meetings have covered topics of peer support and how to start peer support groups in the community, Christina added.

"I think we need to get more people involved in the conversation," Christina said. "I think the best prevention is to talk about it. We just need to start saying the words. 'You are doing heroin; you are talking about suicide.' These are things we like to quietly keep in the corner that we don't deal with, but helping people realize there is an organic connection with substance abuse and mental illness is key, and we can all develop problems with mental health and substance abuse pending on what paths we choose in life. At the end of the day we are all people, and we deserve the same standards of care."

With that in mind, Christina says substance abuse counseling fits RISE's mission.

"We see the two issues go hand in hand," Christina said. "While not everyone who has mental illness also has substance abuse disorder, and not everyone who has substance abuse disorder also has mental illness, a lot of people with substance abuse disorder have some kind of mental health difficulties."

From the RISE perspective, helping Douglas County residents seek services that are currently available is difficult due to numerous hurdles, including transportation. Coles County and Champaign County have substance abuse services available, though Douglas County does not.

"When you talk about people who have probation, DCFS, and all of these other things to do, it's just hard," Christina said. "What we end up seeing is the person just doesn't do it at all, which our mission is that we believe people can recover and people can be in recovery and people can live in recovery. So, what can we do to help remove the barriers? Our answer to that was at least to provide some type of service."

A key in the Douglas County strategic plans is the need for transportation and treatment facilities.

"We didn't want anyone left untreated just because they couldn't get there," Hays said.

RISE has submitted the state application to provide outpatient substance abuse counseling locally, however there is no timeline provided by the state detailing when services could be available at this time. Though RISE decided prior to the Douglas County ROSC discussions to apply for the application, Christina's crew has received guidance on the components and structure of the application through contacts made at the council table.

"I have never been part of us all sitting in the same room," Christina said. "It's neat to see us all sit down to say this is a problem in our community and these are community members we care about. We are always going to get further as a team than we are as separate entities or organizations."

The Douglas County stakeholders meet monthly on Wednesdays from 10:30-11:30 a.m. For more information contact Hays at 217-258-6018 ext. 526. The next meeting will be Wednesday, July 24 at the Douglas County Health Department.
