As a small town girl growing up in rural Kenhas come a long way from the rolling hills of Russell County to the streets of New York City.

Coffey, a 2009 graduate of The Center for Rural Development's Rogers Scholars program, is a freelance science and health reporter working in New York and operating her own freelance business.

While Coffey is pursuing a career in journalism, it was her experience as a Rogers Scholar that helped direct and motivated her to plan for the future.

"Meeting the other encouraged Scholars and inspired me to dream a little bigger," Coffey said. "It was the first step in the right direction.'

Eleven years later, Coffey is well on her way to following her dreams. She graduated from New York University in 2019 with a master's degree in journalism and started working as a freelance science and health reporter.

Coffey attended the University of Kentucky and graduated with a bachelor of science degree in agriculture biotechnology. After graduating from UK, she moved to Denmark to study molecular nutrition, specifically the connection between food and disease, on a Fulbright Fellowship and graduated from Aarhus University with a master's degree in molecular nutrition and food technology.

tucky, Rogers Scholars Coffey later moved back alum Donavyn Coffey to Lexington to work at a biotech company, but soon discovered that was not the career path she wanted to follow in life.

> "After a while I realized, I liked to talk about science more than I liked to run experiments," Coffey said. "So, I first became a science writer and then moved to New York to pursue journal-

Creamery
Continues Giving back to the Community

Cheyenne Popplewell The Times Journal

Supporting small businesses in our little down does truly matter! Here is one example of the "why". Every month Reel Java & Creamery picks a new give-back group to receive 10% of RJC coffee & ice cream sales! For the month of January, Bernard Ridge Church of Gods Youth Group was honored to fill this spot and were thankful to receive a check to help sponsor a worship trip for the young adults.

After speaking with Heather Weaver, owner of RJC, she told me that RJC has been able to pour over $5,500 back into local groups and the community over the last year!

February's "Give-Back" from RJC is going towards RCHS Seniors who apply for Reel Java & Creamery's Scholarship. Heather and her husband Al told me that they want to encourage young adults to pursue their dreams and never want a financial burden to be the reason they don't follow through.

This is the first year that RJC has offered a scholarship and they look forward to continuing it for many years. Russell County High School Seniors can apply for the scholarship at, http://form.jotform. com/200327801301034. The application deadline is April 10th, 2020.

There's also an informative video series about common outage questions on the utilities' YouTube page.

•Be safe: Always assume any downed wire is an energized power line. Stay away and report it immediatelv. LG&E customers should call 502-589-1444 and KU customers should call 800-981-0600. Visit lge-ku. com/storm for important safety information concerning portable generators, food storage and electric service.

Before severe weather strikes, LG&E and KU prepare by monitoring weather conditions, placing field crews and business partners on alert and readying operating equipment and material. When responding to major power outages across the utilities' service territory, priority is given to critical-care organizations, such as hospitals, fire and police stations and nursing homes. LG&E and KU crews also focus on restoring service to schools, airports and other utility infrastructure, such as water and sewer pumping stations.

In making repairs, the goal is to fix problems that will restore power to large groups of customers simultaneously, so hundreds or even thousands of customers come back online at one time. LG&E and KU must first repair any critical infrastructure that might be damaged, like transmission lines and substations that carry electricity neighborhoods and commercial areas, before power can be restored to those locations. Crews then move to restore neighborhoods and then continue to address issues that affect power to individual streets and homes.

In addition to using the numbers above, customers can also report outages by texting OUTAGE to 454358 (4LGEKU) and request updates on their outage by texting STATUS to the same number. While every storm is unique and presents distinct challenges to utility crews, LG&E and KU remain committed to restoring power safely and as quickly as possible — and keeping customers informed.
