At the end of a meeting last week, Jamestown City Councilman Barry Coffey cleared his throat and made a request.

"I do have something, and I don't really know how to bring it forward," Coffey told the Council. "But the way things are in this country right now...it's sad the way things are. It's terrible."

"People are disrespecting the flag," Coffey added. "And it hurts me."

Coffey said he was aware prayer and the Pledge of Allegiance is conducted at other governmental meetings, as he stated, "And I just wanted to bring it forward...if anybody wants to."
