Archery range nearing completion at Traceway Park

Special to The Clinton Courier

City officials hope that the range will be a place for novices and experts alike to enjoy the rapidly growing sport. Archery as a sport is growing exponentially in the U.S. The number of Americans participating in archery stood at 21.6 million just a few years ago.

Parks and Recreation officials are working with the Director of Archery at the Mississippi High School Activities Association to provide opportunities for youth in the Metro Jackson area. In just over three years, archery in Mississippi schools has grown to over 8,000 students participating in archery from the fifth grade to the twelfth grade.

Bow hunters will use the targets to sharpen their aim for bow season, and outdoor enthusiasts could also utilize the space as a unique date night.

Naturally designed to space participants more than six feet apart, the range will be a great place to enjoy the outdoors while also respecting the new social distancing norms created by the Coronavirus.

Parks and recreation department staff is working on rules and usage fees that will be used to expand the facilities offerings and maintain adequate targets.
