TREND-PROOF IT!

It is human nature to want our interiors to feel fresh and on-trend! But, falling too deeply for any interior design trend is risky, as all trends come to an end. So how can you design your home in a way that fits the current era but also lasts you a lifetime? Trend-proof it! Start by using what you already own and love. Add a few unique pieces that speak to who you are—anything from reupholstering a cherished piece in a performance fabric, to re-framing family photos, or adding a vintage vase full of fresh flowers. Next, bring the outdoors in with light filtering shades and frame the view using elegant draperies. These updates will always give your home a welcoming feel! Tie these together with a few trendy decorative items that can easily be replaced when the trend ends. Lastly, never underestimate what a good deep cleaning and a reorganizing session can do for your home.

This bathroom was an absolute pleasure to design as the client has been calling me “her decorator” for over nine years! What a joy it is to build lasting relationships with those that depend on me to solve their interior design challenges! Part of my job is to find out what works and what does not, then create a design that is as functional as it is beautiful! This bathroom had the bones but not the build! What I mean by that is, it had room to expand and a vaulted ceiling – great bones! However, it was not built to capitalize on the daylighting coming through the skylight or high ceilings. Once the design was framed in, the space immediately brightened up like a
