

BETTER HEALTH REGIMEN - BETTER SAVINGS

A National Institutes of Health study found that 40% of seniors aged 65 and older take five or more prescription medications, and 90% take at least one prescription. The same study found that as many as 55% of seniors take their medications incorrectly.

In the US, 3.8 billion prescriptions are written every year. Over 50% of the prescriptions are taken incorrectly or not at all.

Not taking medications as prescribed is related to over 125,000 deaths per year in the United States. Poor compliance with medication regimens is associated with up to 40% of nursing home admissions.

Poor medication compliance can result in 3 times as many doctor visits, resulting in $2,000 per year per patient that does not follow their treatment regimens when compared to patients who take their medications as prescribed.

According to the World Health Organization, it costs 3-4 times more for people to pay for the complications that arise from poor diabetes control than it does for people to control their diabetes properly.

Compared with patients who follow instructions, patients who don't take their medications as intended have a risk for hospitalization and premature death that is 5.4 times higher if they have hypertension, 2.8 times higher if they have high cholesterol, and 1.5 times higher if they have heart disease.

What does all this mean to you? Simply put, it cost you more money with higher out of pocket expenses and insurance premiums.
