in twinkling lights, giving the same attention to detail he will soon be giving to his dental patients). Liz Souders, who baked birthday cakes and First Communion cakes from the time Taylor and her sister were tots (thanks to Grandma Georgia Tretter of Dale), still created one of her masterpieces, a tiered cake, but a much smaller version of what had been planned. Keith Bauer with Huntingburg Greenhouse worked his magic to create wedding flowers and decorations.

The third groomsman, a friend of the couple, had become a father just a month before, and with a tiny infant and new mom at home, it was decided it would not be safe for him to take part.

Still, despite all the changes the wedding went off without a hitch.

By all accounts the ceremony was beautiful and the reception everything the couple could want, despite the many alterations. For music they just made a playlist and while not as polished as Boogie Tunes would have been, Taylor says it worked.

Since travel was restricted, the couple honeymooned for a couple of nights at Sybaris Suites in Indianapolis, voted Indy's most romantic getaway, before returning to Louisville.

So what does the future hold for Trent and Taylor Weyer?

Trent will graduate from dental school in May and on August 2 he begins Commissioned Officers Training at Keesler Air Force Base in Biloxi, Mississippi.

The couple will likely move in July for this next phase of their lives and Taylor might look for something in an ICU there or possibly get into travel nursing. Right now she is so busy at Norton she hasn't had time to formulate a plan, but being a nurse transfers well no matter where the Weyers end up during Trent's military service.

While theirs was not the wedding originally envisioned, both were thrilled with the results. As Taylor explained, "It was just a different kind of perfect."

The lesson here, if there is one to be learned, seems to be that with love and flexibility you can make anything work!
