Protect Your Health

"Dear friend, I pray that you may enjoy good health and that all may go well with you, even as your soul is getting along well."
 —3 John 1:2 NIV

The advice to protect your health might seem obvious, but then why do so many of us engage in unhealthy lifestyles? Most of us eat too much and exercise too little. We ignore our need for sleep, we drive carelessly, and otherwise adopt lifestyles which put our health at risk. Good health is both intrinsically and extrinsically good. That is, it is inherently good, or good in and of itself, but it is also good as a means to other ends, such as happiness. It is difficult to be happy if you are sick or simply living a very unhealthy life, and without good health it is almost impossible to enjoy the other good things in life. So protect your health as one of life's greatest assets, and if you are neglecting any of the major contributors to good health, make a genuine effort to work on them. Don't rationalize your bad health habits by thinking that experts disagree on these issues. There may be disagreement on some of the details of healthy living, but there is broad consensus on the essentials of healthy living. Eat a variety of healthy foods, exercise daily, get enough sleep every night (and have a regular sleep schedule), avoid dangerous activities, such as driving while distracted or not wearing a seatbelt, and avoid dangerous drugs. It's pretty simple, and the benefits of healthy living are inestimable. — Christopher Simon
